Introducing novated leasing the Maxxia way

What is novated leasing?

A novated lease could benefit almost any driver. You don't have to earn big money or drive lots of kilometres. And it doesn't have to be a new car – in fact, you could lease a second-hand car or even your existing car.

A novated lease is an agreement between you, your employer and a finance company that lets you pay for a car and its regular expenses with some of your pre-tax salary.

How does it work?

Novated leasing lets you salary package the cost of getting into and running a car with some of your before-tax dollars, which means you could lower your taxable income.

You also get the convenience of bundling running costs such as fuel, rego, insurance and servicing into one regular payment.
